THE VISION

A dementia care campus built around daily life.

Inspired by the Hogeweyk model from the Netherlands and adapted for East Texas families, the Memory Health Life Center is being designed as a residential community, not a hallway. Residents will live in homes, walk the grounds, tend gardens and animals, and share daily life with neighbors, caregivers, and visiting students.

WHY MEMORY CARE MATTERS

Rural East Texas families are facing dementia alone.

The need is here. The current options aren't enough. Families travel for hours to reach specialists, caregivers carry years of around-the-clock care without support, and existing facilities too often default to confinement.

"This town could be a community, an Alzheimer's-friendly community, where the restaurants and everybody in town would understand how Alzheimer's works."

Debbie Robinson · President, Wood County Health Care Foundation

CONFIRMED

WHAT THE CENTER WILL PROVIDE

Care that looks like a life, not a hallway.

Homes, a working farm, gardens, classrooms, and the people to make it real, under one roof, in one community.

REGIONAL RESOURCE

Built in Quitman.
Built for the region.

Adjacent to UT Health Quitman Hospital. A teaching site for the University of Texas at Tyler School of Medicine. Designed to serve East Texas families, including low- and moderate-income families, with a model that prizes daily life over containment.
